School of Sustainability Student Engagement Opportunities

Academy
The School of Sustainability Academy is a community of high-achieving, socially embedded sustainability students. The academy fosters academic success, leadership skills, community engagement, and persistence to graduate and reach goals beyond graduation. Academy experiences are available to all first year students, and require membership eligibility and renewal to continue participation. Additional information can be found at sos.asu.edu/academy.

College Council
The School of Sustainability College Council works to foster a greater sense of community within the School of Sustainability. By implementing a number of social engagement opportunities, the College Council strives to build a meaningful connection between our students and the School of Sustainability, the ASU campus and the greater Valley community. Through collaboration with our faculty and staff, College Council aims to enhance faculty-student relations and represent our student body to the Undergraduate Student Government and to the School of Sustainability. Membership is open to all School of Sustainability students, and elections for leadership positions are held every November. Additional information can be found at sos.asu.edu/clubs.

Ambassadors
The School of Sustainability Ambassadors group is made up of student leaders who assist in recruitment and retention efforts for the college. The Ambassadors represent the student perspective to future students, parents and the community at-large. They also serve as resources to current sustainability students and help connect these students to the college through programs and events. Interviews for Ambassador positions are conducted in late spring. Students interested should watch for the call for applications in the SOS advising e-newsletter. A list of current Ambassadors can be found at sos.asu.edu/ambassadors.

Honor Society for Sustainability
The Honor Society for Sustainability is a network of sustainability scholars that have demonstrated academic excellence and are committed to solving global sustainability challenges. The Honor Society for Sustainability has two primary goals for its members: to give back to the community through service, and to provide pre-professional development opportunities through guest speakers, networking mixers with alumni and business representatives, and faculty engagement. Two $500 scholarships are also available each year to Honor Society members. The Honor Society for Sustainability is open to sustainability majors and other students with 30 credit hours completed in sustainability concentrations and a minimum GPA of 3.50. Additional information can be found at sos.asu.edu/honorsociety.
Sustainabilibuddies
The Sustainabilibuddy Peer Mentor Program is coordinated by a group of upper-class School of Sustainability students in order to provide friendship, mentorship and peer-to-peer resource sharing to our first year students. Upperclassmen are connected with first year students based on academic interests, personal hobbies and mutual passions in order to establish a peer support network for first year students. Additional information can be found at sos.asu.edu/clubs.

Sustainability Review
The Sustainability Review (tSR), strive to communicate sustainability science and practice to a diverse audience through monthly features, special pieces and peer-reviewed science videos using a variety of media. The Sustainability Review especially focuses on the video format to best capture and share the images, concepts and ideas of sustainability research for the modern world. To learn more about tSR’s innovative multimedia approach to sustainability communications, pitch a story idea or inquire about joining the staff, please visit thesustainabilityreview.org.

Changemaker Central
Changemaker Central is an ASU initiative designed to develop and nurture students by providing the opportunities and resources to inspire, catalyze and sustain student-driven social change through community service, high impact careers and social entrepreneurship. The initiative delivers a portfolio of student-led, university-wide programs that include the ChangemakerChallenge – a seed-funding competition for early stage projects and ventures – and Devils in Disguise, a fifteen year tradition and ASU’s largest day of student-led community service. Additional information can be found at changemaker.asu.edu.

Contact
There are many more opportunities to get connected. For general questions about getting involved on campus, please visit sos.asu.edu/clubs. If you have specific questions, please email SOSEngagement@asu.edu.
