

spring 2012 convocation

May 3, 2012 ASU Gammage

Message from the Dean

Welcome to Arizona State University and the nation's first School of Sustainability. I am proud to join you on this remarkable occasion.

Convocation is a ceremony quite literally robed in medieval traditions. The garments worn today signal to the world that these men and women are ready to move forward in excellence to the next level of their careers. Whether they stay in academia and choose to do research and teach others, or move into jobs that require practical application of everything they have gained in this institution, they will take with them the memories and knowledge imparted on them by this school and this university. We honor them, their hard work and discipline. We acknowledge the completion of this part of their journey and remember fondly the time we had the privilege of spending with them.

Our students and graduates are addressing some of the most critical challenges of our time, and the knowledge and solutions that they create today will shape the quality of life for future generations. They are thinking in new ways about the natural and social environment, about equity between different parts of the planet, about the norms and aspirations of its peoples, and about what is realistically achievable in a world that will soon count nine billion inhabitants.

The candidates we honor today join their predecessors in what will surely be a long and distinguished line of sustainability graduates; they are the intellectual capital upon which so much of our future depends. We count on them to be wise citizens in the complex world we live in today. Their decisions and actions will impact us all.

We hope they continue to reach out into society to help identify and implement practical 'sustainability solutions' in a wide range of domains, from urban planning and management to alternative energy, environmental decision-making, supply-chain management and food security, seeking the best outcomes for both human and natural environments both now and into the indefinite future.

All these aspects of our program strive to make sustainability a fundamental cornerstone of the cultures of the many societies inhabiting our planet, and of the behavior of the people involved.

I wish today's graduates the very best and look forward to remaining connected and collectively furthering the cause of a sustainable planet!

About the School of Sustainability

The School of Sustainability, established in 2007, offers transdisciplinary degree programs that advance practical solutions to environmental, economic, and social challenges of sustainability—especially as they relate to urban areas.

The School offers graduate programs leading to Doctor of Philosophy, Master of Arts, and Master of Science degrees in Sustainability and undergraduate programs leading to Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science degrees in Sustainability.

We focus on collaborative learning, innovative approaches, and problem-oriented training to address sustainability challenges relating to energy and materials, water, ecosystems, urbanization, international development, social transformations, climate change, and food systems. For more information, visit: schoolofsustainability.asu.edu.

The School is part of the Global Institute of Sustainability, which is the hub of ASU's sustainability initiatives. The Institute advances research, education, and business practices for an urbanizing world. For more information, visit: sustainability.asu.edu.

What is a Gonfalon?

A gonfalon is a flag or banner of medieval origin, traditionally displayed during ceremonies and processions. In academia, gonfalons represent the different fields of study within a university. They typically include the established academic color for the discipline as well as a representative symbol or emblem.

The School of Sustainability Gonfalon

This banner of ASU maroon and gold features fields of scarab green, the shade established by Arizona State University as the academic color for the new discipline of sustainability. The symbol adorning the School of Sustainability's gonfalon is a city skyline surrounded by a vine growing in an unbroken circle. The skyline denotes economic growth and social justice, while the twining vine signifies the natural environment and its relationship to all things.

Students whose names appear in this program are candidates for the degrees listed, which will be conferred subject to completion of requirements.

University commencement and convocation ceremonies are special events for all involved. Please show respect for everyone who has come to share in the experience. As a courtesy to those around you and to our graduating students, please turn off pagers and cellular phones during the ceremony.
